'AGLA' MICROMETER
SYRINGE OUTFIT
(QUER FITTING)

Made in Britain

The 'Agla' brand Micrometer Syringe Outfit was developed at the Wellcome Research Laboratories, Beckenham, Kent, England (Biochem. J., 1925, 19, 1111) for use in experimental techniques requiring the accurate measurement of very small volumes of fluid. It consists of a specially made and calibrated all-glass hypodermic syringe, attached by a rigid holder to a micrometer screw gauge which operates the plunger.

Calibration

One complete revolution of the micrometer head advances the plunger of the syringe by 0.5 mm, delivering a volume of 0.01 ml. The total graduated travel of the micrometer (50 revolutions or 25 mm) thus corresponds to a delivered volume of 0.5 ml.

The peripheral scale of the micrometer head is divided into fiftieths of a revolution; each graduation on this scale thus corresponds to a volume of 0.0002 ml.

Each syringe is tested at the Wellcome Research Laboratories. The required accuracy is such that volumes as small as 0.01 ml. may be measured to within ± 0.00005 ml.

Uses

The micrometer syringe outfit may be used in all operations requiring the accurate measurement of very small volumes of liquid—e.g. chemical micro-titrations, serological titrations, injection of laboratory animals with small doses, measurements of small volumes for Langmuir trough experiments, and surface tension measurements.

Notes
The syringe is designed to take any needle with the standard Luer type mount. Glass capillary needles, either bent at right angles or straight, are available for use with corrosive liquids.

Sterilisation

For sterilisation, the all-glass syringe must be detached from the metal holder. Sterilisation may be effected by dry heat or by autoclaving; for chemical disinfection, the disassembled glass syringe should be immersed in freshly-distilled 70-75 per cent alcohol for at least five minutes. Attention is drawn to the recommendations set out in the Medical Research Council War Memorandum No. 15, The sterilisation, use and care of syringes, London, 1945.

Storage
Exposure of the micrometer to corrosive fumes should be avoided. When not in use, the instrument should be applied in the box provided.

Repairs
Each working part of the glass syringe is specially fitted to its counterpart and is not replaceable by a similar part from another syringe. In most cases, if the nozzle and/or piston be broken (but not the barrel), the syringe can be repaired. Attempts should be exerted to repair the barrel. Spare glass syringes should be carried in case while the repair is being effected. Jan 10000-0-1
